Lincoln at Close Range

A Rough Exterior and the Soul of a Prophet—How He Impressed Greeley, Douglas, Cullom, Woodford, Voorhees and Others

[Copyright, 1908, by J. A. Edgerton.]
AFTER all, it is the personal touch that counts. Those who have known him, who have seen him in his daily life, who have heard his voice and know his human side—it is they who can bring the hearts of men to him.
Abraham Lincoln is one of whom the world especially demands this intimate knowledge, for there is no one, in modern times at least, that so peculiarly appeals to men's hearts.
Great men have filled the world's intellect and imagination more than he, but none in our day has been so loved. It is the very humanness of the man that endears him to us. For this reason we treasure every scrap of personal testimony concerning him.
And yet there is another side of Lincoln that the touch with his homely human nature, however intimate, does not reveal. It is a misty, elusive something, an undiscovered greatness, a quality that cannot be weighed or bounded or defined. He surprises us with unexpected depths and beauties. He reveals to us glimpses of outlooks over undiscovered countries. Behind his rough exterior we seem to sense the soul of a prophet. At a distance he appears almost as one of those legendary divine figures that we are told came to guide men when the world was young. Surely if in our prosaic age any one has been sent for a work and has not seen Abraham Lincoln was such a one. And to this view even the personal impressions bear witness.
Horace Greeley in an undelivered lecture published in the Century many years after his death has given many glimpses of Lincoln. Probably none more interesting than his first impression.
It was of the time that Lincoln served in congress and refutes the idea that the future emancipator was homely, at least at the time in question. Greeley said:
"Lincoln was not quite forty years old. He was genial, cheerful, rather comely, noticeably tall and the only Whig from Illinois—not remarkable otherwise, to the best of my recollection. He was generally liked on our side of the house. He made two or three moderate speeches which attracted little attention. He voted generally to forbid the introduction of slavery into the territories, but he did not vote for Mr. Galt's resolution looking to the immediate abolition of slavery in the federal district. There were men accounted able on our side of the house, yet I judge that no other was more generally liked and esteemed than he. And yet had each of us been required to name the man among us who would first attain the presidency, I doubt whether five of us would have designated Abraham Lincoln."
Daniel W. Voorhees paid this tribute to the courage of the first martyr president:
"I was in congress while Lincoln was in the White House and saw a great deal of him. He was a man who knew nothing of physical fear, and while men about him used to tell him stories of possible assassination and the necessity of care, Lincoln never seemed to pay much heed to them. He was often seen walking about the streets or making frequent excursions to the forts and camps and other points about Washington. I don't think he was afraid of anything on earth."
Ex-Governor Alvin Saunders of Nebraska when a boy saw much of Lincoln and heard his stories. Of these he said:
"It has always seemed to me, though it is a contrary view to that held by the majority of those who knew him, that Lincoln's stories were never told for the purpose of raising a laugh, but were related solely for illustration or rebuke, and when the latter was the case the man against whom it was directed would grasp only the funny points of his stories and would ignore the lessons they were intended to teach."
When in his thirties Lincoln was a member of the Illinois legislature. Of that time an eyewitness says:
"He certainly was one of the leading members and, I think, was regarded as the equal of any member of the house in debate and ability. He was awkward in manner when speaking. He had a swaying motion of the body and a swinging of his long arms that were somewhat ungainly. And I remember to have heard the members laughing and talking about appointing a committee to hold his coat-tails when he was speaking and keep them still."
Here is a much earlier glimpse of a time when the coming president was in his twenties. The reporter, Robert Wornick, was then a neighbor boy. He says:

"Abe was an ungainly, awkward young fellow and always ready to do somebody else a good turn. He wore homespun and in summer was barefoot. I have seen him at many a house raising and other gathering of the kind. He was always one of the men picked out to carry up a corner."
It was while laid up with frozen feet at the house of Mr. Wornick's father that Lincoln began the study of law. As a lawyer one of his colleagues afterward said of him:
"He was as wise as a serpent in the trail of a case, but I have had too many scars from his blows to certify that he was as harmless as a dove."
Concerning Lincoln's ability as a lawyer Stephen A. Douglas once remarked:
"When Lincoln is right you can't beat him; when he is wrong you must be careful or he'll beat you. This makes a strong man of Lincoln."
General Stewart L. Woodford recently gave this characteristic description of Lincoln as a campaigner. It was the occasion of the Cooper Union speech in 1860:
"I can see him today as I saw him then, an uncouth westerner, whose coat was short in the sleeves and whose trousers did not meet with the tops of his shoes. The thumb of his right hand was in his armpit. As he began to get to a climax of his argument his suspender began to come out until it gradually worked up to the level with his ear. He was perfectly unconscious of the action. When he uttered those immortal words, 'Freedom is national and slavery is sectional,' the whole hall rose as one man. Lincoln paused, appeared to realize where his suspender was, flushed and let go. The suspender flew back into its place again."
President Lincoln was the master of his cabinet and knew how to take things into his own hands when necessary. Colonel J. M. Scovel tells this inside history of the move that insured peace between the United States and Great Britain at the time that Mason and Sifford were captured. Without letting Secretary Stanton know of the move Lincoln wrote directly to Queen Victoria. In reply he received a letter from her assuring him that the peaceful condition existing between America and England would remain unchanged. In this connection Colonel Scovel quotes Richard Cobden's estimate of the great emancipator—that "this century has produced no man like him." And Mr. Cobden added, "It is not strange that Queen Victoria thoroughly understands and highly esteems the president of the United States."
For a general view of Lincoln the following by Senator Shelby M. Cullom of Illinois is perhaps as comprehensive as any:
"It has been my fortune to know Abraham Lincoln in all the walks of life—as a private citizen, as a candidate for congress, as a statesman—and I heard a portion of his great debate with Douglas, which was the most noted discussion of political questions which ever occurred in this country outside of the halls of congress. I knew him as president, and was permitted to know him in the sacred precincts of his family at home. I have studied the lives of the great men of the world, and now, after nearly fifty years have passed away since his death, I do not hesitate to give it as my opinion that he was the peer in all that makes a man great, useful and noble of any man of any age in the world's history."
Of the martyr president's prophetic quality, the many times he seemed to feel a presentiment that he would lose his life in the struggle for freedom to all. There is even a story, now little told, of a vision he had in connection with a mirror in his room which led him to feel that he would be assassinated.
Perhaps Robert C. Ogden has given this element of Lincoln's character its final statement in the following words, recently addressed to a Bible class in New York city:
"I shall never forget the president as I saw him in church after the battle of Antietam. As he came out the expression of patient sadness on his face came as near the Christ expression as I have ever seen it in a human being."
J. A. EDGERTON.

Rebuke by Lincoln.
Abraham Lincoln could administer a stinging rebuke when the necessity demanded, as thus to General Blunt for fostering "lynch law." "Judge Lynch sometimes takes jurisdiction of cases which prove too strong for the courts, but this is the first case within my knowledge wherein, the court being able to maintain jurisdiction against Judge Lynch, the military has come to the assistance of the latter."
He was rather mild with Carl Schurz: "I certainly know that if the white administration fails and that I will be blamed for it, whether I deserve it or not, and I ought to be blamed if I could do better. You think I could do better. Therefore you blame me already. I think I could not do better. Therefore I blame you for blaming me."

JOURNALS UNFAIR

Sensationalism Chief Cause of Race Prejudice.

White Newspapers Magnify Wrongs of Negro Race.

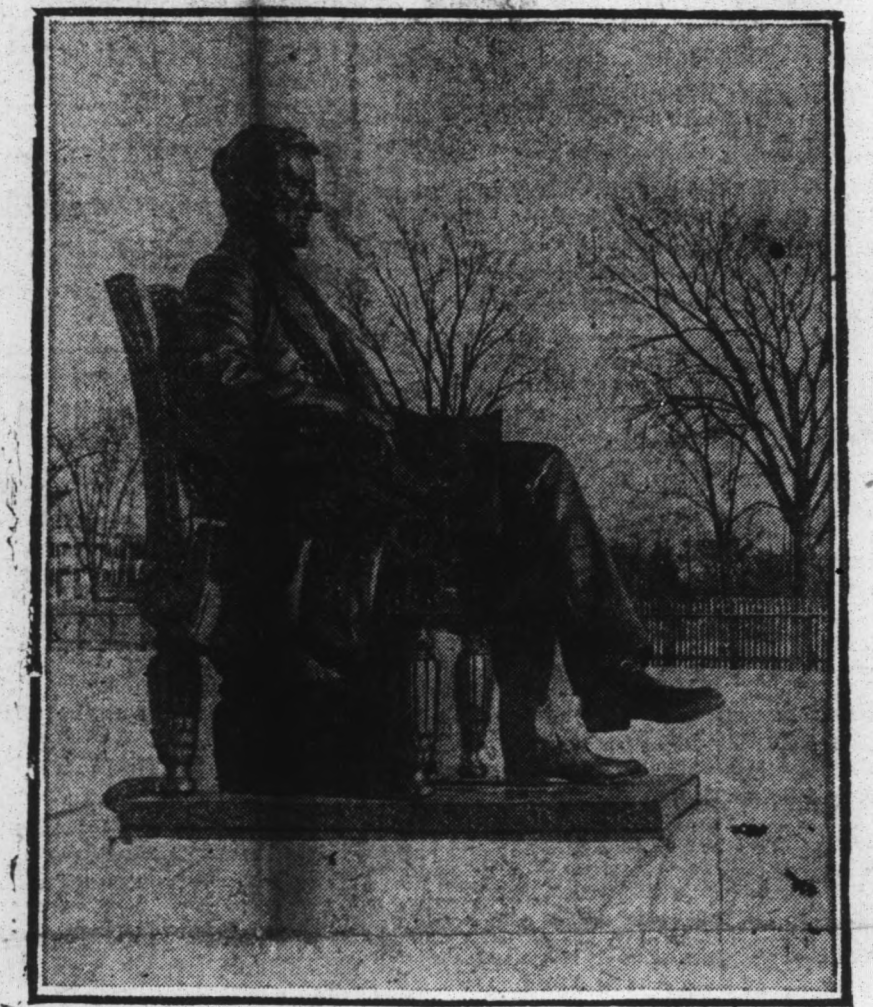

The following article by R. R. Wright Jr., is from McGirt's Magazine, and it clearly shows the daily newspapers in all parts of this country assist in the manufacture of race prejudice against the Afro American:
"That the Negroes of America are suffering great injustice through the newspapers, no one who will take the time to investigate can doubt. The great fault of our newspapers, today is sensationalism, which of course, only reflects on our own great fault. People want to hear of murders, lynchings, suicides, divorces, etc., and the newspapers give them just what they demand."
There is no particular demand for the good side of Negro life, and this is seldom given. To present in concrete form what the people demand concerning the Negroes and what the papers give them, I have clipped from the leading Philadelphia papers each morning for a month's references to the Negroes. It is possible that I may have overlooked some, but I am sure I have secured all the principal ones, which were as follows: There were in all 70 articles referring to Negroes, covering 412 inches. Thirty-six of these articles were about crimes of Negroes, covering 248 inches; 22 articles, of 114 inches, were not, indeed, directly on crimes, but they were on the dark side of Negro life, with pessimistic views of Negroes; 12 articles, of 68 inches, were of miscellaneous character, only 3 of which, covering 7 inches of space, referred to the good side of Negro life, and one of them referred to the education of Negroes.
In other words, it is clear that the articles referring to the crimes of the Negroes, their weaknesses and other shortcomings, and those taking a pessimistic view of the race, took up 87 per cent. of the newspaper space of the month, while articles referring to the good side of Negro life took up only 5 per cent. of this space. The items given most prominence during the month were those referring to assaults on white women and girls, lynching and attempts to lynch Negroes, thefts, race wars, arrests and such like.
Now the great mass of people get their ideas of the Negroes from what they read in the daily papers. Can it be wondered at there has been a growth of hostility toward the Negroes; that many of the former friends are becoming indifferent, if not indeed hostile? The cause is not so much the undue emphasis on crime by the newspapers. All who study the subject carefully are agreed that the Negroes are making much progress against severe odds. But all are not students; the majority of the people are busy men and women, with no time for statistics. It is to them, as well as to the Negroes, that the injustice is done by the undue display of the vice and crime of the race.
The papers have a way of injuring the whole Negro race by the crimes of the individual members. This may not be intentional, but the harm is no less. To illustrate: If you pick up your morning's paper and read of yesterday you will not find "John Doe, a white man, was arrested yesterday," etc., or "Edward Robinson, a Scotchman," or Karl Schmidt, a German," but you will almost certainly find some such note as this: "John Johnson, a Negro, was arrested," etc. That is the crime of the individual Negro is put on the whole Negro race. The reader remembers that a Negro was arrested yesterday, and the day before, and gets it into his mind that Negroes commit undue amount of crime. He is not impressed with the with the large amount of crime committed by the white race, or the English or German elements of population because the papers, as a rule, do not identify white criminals with any particular nationality, except occasionally the Italian.
It does not need an expert in psychology to appreciate the fact that his influence of the newspapers is most damaging, because so subtle and incidental. People get ideas damaging to the race but do not know where they got them. They often think them based upon facts, while linking of the term Negro to the name of every member of that race they too often have their basis in the who is reported as having committed crime, and the reporting of proportionately more crime, with greater emphasis, of Negroes than of whites.
The friends of the Negroes ought not to longer overlook this."

Lincoln In Bronze

By ROBERTUS LOVE

Copyright, 1908, by Robertus Love

HERE do I look upon historic form
Fashioned in bronze grown cold, but glowing yet—
In our Columbia's memory casket set
A sovereign jewel. Earth's unconscious storm
May beat upon and work the statue harm;
Old Time may topple it without regret.
Perish the bronze, but we will not forget
The great heart for its brothers beating warm.

THE hand of Lincoln, bronzed by honest toil,
That drove the ax and felled the forest oak,
Then working up amid the world's turmoil
At one proud blow four million fetters broke:
It is not dust—still does it reach and clasp
Past, present, future, in its kindly grasp!

It is not known in whose interests Mr. Vernon is "looking around" but the supposition is that Taft admirers will hardly receive the icy stare from such an astute politician. Mr. Vernon arrived at 3 p. m. and left at 7 p. m.

CALL IS ISSUED FOR COMMISSIONER

Negroes to Meet in Philadelphia On April 7th to Consider Ills

The positive and notoriously hostile attitude of the government of our republic toward its citizens of color under the present Republican administration and the approach of the party nominating conventions in this year 1908 produce a crisis for one-eighth of the citizenship of these United States of America. The open alliance between the President and the nullifiers of the Constitution in the South constitutes the most flagrant collusion between a Republican President and the Southern Democrats since the emancipation of the American slaves forty-five years ago. save in the case of Andrew Johnson at the close of the Civil War or of Rutherford B. Hayes at the close of the Reconstruction. But it has remained for the present chief executive of the United States to prescribe in official documents an inferior grade of education for one class of citizens, and to thus officially brand that class as concealers of criminals and as rapists, while the defaming and discharging in disgrace of more than a hundred soldiers, all colored, without a trial or chance to be heard in their own defense is a denial of justice and constitutional rights visited upon colored citizens unprecedented in our country's history. The placing of the nation's sanction upon the segregation of citizens for and because of color in public travel but completes the Federal maltreatment of the colored citizens under the present Republican administration, leaving him stripped of rights, branded in contempt.
In view of these unusual and extraordinary conditions, in view of the attempt of the present Czarocratic regime to perpetuate itself in power in imperial fashion, in view of the open candidacy for the Republican party's nomination for the presidency of one who in his official position as a cabinet officer has in speech in the South condoned their disfranchisement of citizens for color in admitted violation of the federal constitution, and who has supinely endorsed in to the proual and autocratic discharge of colored soldiers without trial by executive decree, you as one of a class which almost from necessity has for two generations by its solid support and with a loyalty that sacrifices friends, the chance to make terms with the enemy and even life itself, kept the Republican party almost continuously in power, but one who is free from party obligation, are invited to a National Conference of colored men, and of avowed friends to be held in the City of Philadelphia, Pa., on the 7th day of April, 1908, to counsel together as to the wisest course to be pursued politically by the colored citizens of the country, especially those unrobbed of the ballot who are willing to use this weapon for the rights and liberties of their class, under the present abnormal condition of affairs.
This conference will have special reference to what demands shall be made of political parties as to the national platform and most particularly to what candidates for the presidential nomination most deserve the support of the colored voters. Please come prepared to make a stand for equal rights and constitutional liberty for all in these United States without regard to race, color or creed.

Louis G. Bauer Enters the Field of Candidates

Enjoys a Large Political Support—Will Win Nomination

The announcement of the candidacy of Mr. Louis G. Bauer for the Republican nomination as Commissioner of Marion County to succeed John Mc Gregor, has caused a large number of the party workers and the men in the rank who do things, to not only voice approval to his candidacy but to give earnest pledges of support in helping him secure the nomination to this important office. That it is unrepugnant, to say the least, for one man to hold a public office for the past twelve years and still be seeking a re-nomination, is a feeling shared not only by the party worker—but even the public at large looks on in amazement and there is a well defined expression that the present incumbent must seek for himself a job and cease to feel so self satisfied at the public crib.
Louis G. Bauer is a young man of sterling worth and industry. He has lived in Indianapolis since 1882, residing in the 7th Ward. Since 1886 he has been a taxpayer and has always taken a large interest in all matters affecting the civic welfare of Indianapolis, as well as being a loyal party enthusiast. As a testimonial to the high regard and esteem of his neighbors as a candidate for Councilman in the 8th Ward he succeeded in reducing a democratic majority of over 800 down to 78. He has faithfully served the Republican party in the various stages of party workmanship, but never filled nor aspired to elective office.
That he is the strongest candidate in the field is already conceded by the party's most astute managers. He is a member of the various fraternal or organizations, clubs and German societies which brings to his aid a strong and substantial following. Mr. Bauer can likewise feel assured of a most cordial support from the large Colored vote in Marion County as the Race would appreciate some opportunity to rise above the janitorship level in the various county institutions, and such promotion can only come through a change in the Commissioner's office as the present incumbent is hopeless of color-blind when a promotion is at hand.
Mr. Bauer is efficient, courteous and will give to all citizens and taxpayers a square deal in the administration of the County's affairs. Mr. Bauer is now filling the position of Assistant Market Master at the East Market.
PULLMAN COMPANY AWARDS PRIZES
CHICAGO, February 4.—The Pullman company yesterday distributed nearly $175,000 among the employees who were found to have paid close attention to duty during the year.
The "merit checks" were mailed to 3,770 employees, and of this number 1,153 are conductors and 2,617 are porters. The merit system was established early last year, and the records of the service of the men were kept in the office of Richmond Dean, general manager of the company. Early in the year the management determined to better the service on Pullman cars throughout the country, and the 4,400 conductors and porters were informed that by hearty co-operation with the company's officials each could earn an extra month's salary.
The salaries of conductors range between $75 and $90 a month and the salaries of porters between $25 and $45 a month, according to the length of service. Only those whose records were perfect received checks, and it is expected that the number will be greatly increased this year. It is stated that the conductors' check aggregated $97,090 and the porters' to $77,760.

The Oklahoma Bank Law.

The more the provision of the Oklahoma law providing for the insurance of depositors against loss is studied the more it finds favor as a model among those who are insisting upon radical reforms in banking. The Chicago News recently declared that the growth of the demand for government action in this direction is rapid and widespread. Several states have given serious consideration to the question, and the idea, in some form, has many supporters among the national legislators and among conservative financial authorities on the outside.

The provision of the Oklahoma law referred to creates a state banking board having power to levy assessments upon bank capital stock to constitute a guaranty fund, which, by extra assessments when called for and adjustments, shall be maintained at a certain minimum. Commenting upon this feature of the banking legislation of the youngest of the states, the New York Financier says:

One of the objections offered against the establishment of the guaranty fund principle in general has been that the removal of responsibility to depositors would tend to make bank officers careless, and it is a fact that with the laws which are in force in many states this objection would hold good. The Oklahoma law, however, provides for at least two examinations a year into every bank, and violation of the law sections is punishable by imprisonment. It is to be anticipated, therefore, that officers of banks operating under this law will be foolish indeed to violate its provisions and that Oklahoma banks will be carefully and conservatively managed.

The New York Tribune takes issue with the idea as a general proposition by saying that the fact that no insurance company has entered the field of guaranteeing bank deposits is proof that there is no public demand for such protection. Furthermore, the demand for extra guarantees is not sufficiently strong to commend itself to the consideration of the banks in their intense competition for deposits.

Our Warships Are All Right.

Artist Reuter's severe criticism of our battleships has been replied to at length in the columns of the Scientific American, and the result is one to strengthen the faith of the public in the vessels themselves as a strong factor in our fighting outfit and likewise in the authorities who are responsible for them. It was too much to ask this nation to believe that all the genius for designing and constructing weapons of war which this country's intelligence and resources could command had been occupied in setting afloat a practically useless navy.

The Scientific American boldly asserts that the gravest of the charges printed by Reuter have really no basis in fact. It says the American battleships have more freeboard than most of the same class in the British navy and that they carry their guns much farther above water than do the typical battleships of any of the foreign navies. Furthermore, the fancied defect of the placing of the belt of armor plating in our ships is greatly exaggerated by the artist's critic.

Every man who has seen a ship knows that a war vessel fitted out for a long cruise must be weighted down with extraordinary supplies, which must also gradually lighten. Perhaps at times the muzzles of the lower guns are below the crests of the waves in a stormy sea. But that is not saying that a capable commander will go into action with his fighting efficiency handicapped in that fashion. He will play his strong points for all they are worth and avoid exposing his weak ones. Good tempered criticism of our navy may prove beneficial if rightly timed. However, intemperate attacks of a sweeping nature like the one reviewed by the Scientific American are not only foolish, but in very bad taste, under the present circumstances.

Knockers of the $300,000,000 isthmian canal, as the latest estimates figure it, quickly discovered that the "dear public" did not echo back even a ghost of a sound in approval. The trouble is that the "dear public" wants that canal at any price and would rather see another $100,000,000 to hurry along the completion than to save that amount by old foggy methods.

"More than a million dollars a day for military purposes," is the way one congressman sizes up one item of the budget for 1908-9. Well, it is "a good deal of money," but if Uncle Sam thinks he cannot maintain American dignity on less his nephews must dig up the coin somehow.

A French legislator has suggested that titles be taxed at $80 each. That will be regarded as a trifling sum by those who can come over here and dispose of a life interest in their title for several millions.

"New York," says Gertrude Atherton, "never makes up its own mind about anything." Certainly not. It is too busy making up the mind of the rest of the country.

Frederick Douglass.

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

"Born a slave, he became famous as orator and journalist."

THE first American negro who achieved a wide fame was Frederick Douglass. Born a slave at a place in Maryland bearing the odd name of Tuckahoe, the name first conferred upon him was Frederick Augustus Washington Bailey, truly an abundance for a pickaninny with apparently no prospects in life other than those of a bondman serving a master. But Frederick Augustus Washington was different from the ordinary pickaninny. Nature had conferred upon him a large head containing gray matter which could not be kept behind in life's race by the handicap of a dark skin. When Frederick was a small boy he was sent to Baltimore to work in a shipyard. There he 'managed to get a little schooling.

Not always is a little learning a dangerous thing, though in Frederick's case it did prove dangerous to his owner from a commercial point of view. Healthy, hefty slaves in those days were worth a matter of a thousand dollars apiece. The little book learning acquired by the slave boy put into his head the determination to become free. He escaped in the disguise of a sailor and made his way to Massachusetts, where he read and studied to such advantage that when he reached the age of twenty-four he was able to deliver a lecture at an antislavery convention in Nantucket which brought him an invitation to go to England and deliver lectures on the slavery problem in America. He had changed his name to Douglass when he ran away.

In England Douglass raised $12,500, with which he formally purchased his freedom from his southern owner. Then he settled in Rochester, N. Y., and became widely known as a journalist and orator. His paper, the North Star, later changed in title to Frederick Douglass' Paper, pleaded for many years the cause of the slave. Douglass had three sons in the Union armies. He was a presidential elector in 1872. United States marshal and recorder of deeds successively from 1879 to 1886 and became minister to Haiti in 1891.

Second Baptist Church

Another Statement on Much Mooted Church Dissensions

To The Recorder:

Many, perhaps, are asking why "Old Second Baptist church" refuses positively to attend any kind of a council with the white Baptists of the city. We say in answer: If the white Baptists of this city had been previously affiliating with the colored Baptists; if, like the Christian churches, the white Baptists on all occasions of merit couniled with us, then we would listen to them now. If the black Baptists are capable of settling every thing else—missionary, educational, spiritual—then they are capable of settling misunderstandings.

What did the colored Baptists decide? They decided that "Old Second Baptist church" should declare that the turning out of the minority members of the church was not right, because we were not in the right spirit when we did it. They instructed us to throw wide open our doors and let those members come back without asking any questions. They said on that Wednesday and Friday nights of that same week the church voted unanimously to comply with those instructions. Our doors have been flung open for three months.

Regardless of what others may say or think "Old Second Baptist Church" is composed of true Christians who are laboring for the upbuilding of the cause of Christ. While others are worrying about what to do with us, we are doing the Master's bidding—forty converts have been baptized this year and ten are waiting; fifty-one dollars has already been given to foreign Missions this year; twelve dollars has been given to home Mission; twenty-five dollars has been given to the poor of the church and the city. We have a large and progressive Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. and our congregation is second to none in the city, and above all we have, with open hearts, held out a hand hearty welcome to the minority members of our church. We have done what the colored Baptist Council, appointed by our General Association, told us to do and declared that was final and that is all we will do.

Second Baptist Church, REV. C. H. JOHNSON, Pastor, MARY B. HITCHENS, Ch. Clerk.
